BASEMENT REMODEL

If you've ever thought about remodeling your basement, you may already have an idea of how you and your loved ones would use your new living space. Maybe you want to turn the basement into a home theater, a playroom for the kids, or even a "man cave." Yet, while you may already know how you'd like to make use of your finished basement, you may not know exactly how you'll go about completing your basement renovation project. That's where Tri-State Construction comes in. Our basement finishing method has been designed specifically for basement environments and offers a number of impressive features that set it apart from other companies. Rather than continuing to neglect your basement, transform this wasted space into one of your family's favorite places.

Unlike some other areas of the house, basements tend to have more moisture. The presence of moisture makes it imperative that the right materials be used in order to avoid mold and mildew buildup over time. While wood and drywall make excellent options for above-ground construction, they are not necessarily the best fit for the basement, because they are prone to warping and rotting.

Additional Advantages and Benefits:

It's less costly than adding an addition to your property. Research has shown that on a per square foot basis you can save half of what you'd pay for an addition by transforming existing basement space.

Lower your heating and cooling bills by efficiently insulating your basement walls. The correct insulation helps keep your basement warm in the winter by keeping the heat in your home and cool in the summer by preventing the heat from coming in.

By renovating your basement, you will increase the total space in your home—add another bedroom, kids' playroom, home theater, or office—and get it done in a timely manner.

Finish Your Basement Today!

You can turn your unfinished basement into anything you can imagine. Let us help you take the first step with your basement remodeling project.

Repointing

Repointing is the process of carefully removing deteriorated mortar from the joints of a masonry wall and replacing it with new mortar that has been intelligently formulated. If done well, repointing (also incorrectly referred to as tuck-pointing) will both protect the building and enhance its historical character. Improperly done, repointing not only detracts from the appearance of the wall, but may cause damage to the historic masonry units themselves.

Cracks, Leaks & Settlement

Masonry construction is both strong and durable, but is also susceptible to cracking due to the many forces acting upon it. When working on historic structures, making the correct decisions on how to properly deal with cracked masonry is very important. Your masonry is likely bearing the weight of everything above it. Repairing cracked masonry with the wrong materials and/or methods often leads to additional failure of the masonry. Over time, a variety of complex forces act upon masonry causing it to deteriorate, weaken, and crumble prematurely. Identifying the causes of masonry deterioration and recommending the most appropriate intervention is an important process best left to experts.

Deterioration & Sprawling Bricks

Over time, a variety of complex forces act upon masonry causing it to deteriorate, weaken, and crumble prematurely. Identifying the causes of masonry deterioration and recommending the most appropriate intervention is an important process best left to experts. An improperly repaired chimney can be unsafe, even short-lived.

EXTENSIONS - ADDITIONS

Additions and extensions are a simple way to increase size and usable space in your home. The size of your home in comparison to those in your neighborhood is an important factor to consider before adding a room (additions). If your home is one of the smaller or average sized houses in the neighborhood, then adding a room or rooms makes more sense than adding to a home which is already one of the largest in the area. Adding a room to a home which is large in comparison to the rest of the neighborhood does not always make sense, because when the time comes to sell the home, the resale value generally is not as high as it would be if the home were located in an area where the other homes are more comparable in size. Most people would prefer to purchase a smaller home in an affluent neighborhood than purchase the largest home in a neighborhood of smaller homes.

For many homeowners who need more space, moving may not be the answer. Most room additions consist of extending the size of your home by adding the new room to an exterior wall. Popular room additions are new bedrooms, but dens, living rooms, dining rooms, and studios or studios can easily be included, depending on the needs of the family. A growing trend in today's society is to add comfortable, private spaces for aging parents, while sharing the traditional family areas.

INTERIOR REMODELING

Your home should fit your lifestyle, your needs, and your tastes. Creating the interior that best suites you will allow for the greatest enjoyment. Finding creative ways to enhance the existing space within your home can oftentimes cost three times less than adding new space. So think about the space in your home and how you can expand it's potential.

Attics are often a forgotten space simply reserved for storage at best. But amazing things can be done with your attic space. Many people use the space to create an apartment-like space. It can include a bedroom, bathroom and living area. Sometimes this is done to create a private area for guests or maybe teenagers who are seeking a little more privacy.

Basements can greatly add to the usable footprint of your home. And the uses are plentiful. Many homeowners transform their dark and dank space into bright, airy gorgeous and functional rooms. Some common basement renovations include:

- Home offices
- Exercise rooms
- Playrooms
- Laundry rooms
- Living areas
- Television/media space
- Man caves
- Game rooms
- Bedrooms
- Bathrooms

Built-ins can provide an elegant way to add both storage and interest to any room. Because they are custom-built they can be designed to fit the layout of the room and the use you desire. They are sleek and allow for maximize usage of space. Built-ins are most often found in family rooms, home offices, bedrooms and basements.

Once a room in the house where you are sure to keep the door closed, laundry rooms have evolved quite considerably. This space in the home is now often used in additional ways. Children's locker space is a popular use of this space and even reading and office areas.

Home offices are wildly popular remodels. In fact, it's not at all uncommon to see homes with multiple offices. Incorporating the latest technology, built-in furniture and storage, windows, and lighting can turn a standard room into a comfortable and productive space.

Open, airy floor plans are today's standard for the first floor of homes. Opening up walls and creating a contiguous area often between the kitchen and family room and even the dining room is a great way to maximize space in your home and create an inviting and functional flow to the space.

There's virtually not a space in your home that can't be leveraged. An under staircase reading nook is a great example of that. Creating functional and aesthetically pleasing space can add to the usability and attractiveness of your home. It can be a fairly simple and easy way to create a unique, designer look in your home.

Foyers are the space in your home where the initial impression is made on your guests. The colors, style, and design should reflect your personality and complement the rest of your home. Staircases, lighting, paint colors, built-ins and other design treatments can transform a purely functional space into a focal point of your first floor.

Sunrooms can add relaxing and functional space to your home. They are often a great way to add light to an otherwise dark space by incorporating lots of windows to allow natural sunlight to filter in. They can provide an ideal way to bring the outdoors in.

NEW CONSTRUCTION

As general contractor, we assume responsibility for a project once design documents have been prepared by a design professional hired by the Owner. Theoretically, all general contractors should construct in accordance with the completed drawings and within the agreed time frame and budget. In reality, such is not the case.

The differences among contractors hinge on expertise, ability to effectively track and manage a project during construction phase, as well as diligence in closely monitoring various crews and subcontractors. Budget consciousness and a dedication to deadlines are not only technically important, but also matters of attitude. At Rem0del Construction, we have consistently met our clients' expectations regarding budget, quality and schedule.

While some contractors will promise the world in order to win a construction contract, we promise only what we can deliver and we deliver what we promise.

Design-Build (DB)

As Design-Builder, we assume responsibility for all architectural, engineering and construction needs of a project. We accomplish this by entering into a contractual agreement with our client to provide comprehensive design and construction services.

Using collaborative project management of design and construction, problems are solved faster. Shorter design schedules lead to improved project schedules. Time-sensitive materials can be ordered earlier because design and procurement schedules are aligned, which decreases the overall project duration.

HIGH QUALITY VINYL SIDING:

Adding vinyl siding to your home makes it more beautiful, energy-efficient and valuable. With an added bonus of virtually eliminating maintenance time and costs!

Here are four reasons to choose vinyl siding for your property:

Durability:

One of the main reasons homeowners choose vinyl siding is because it is long lasting and durable. Vinyl siding can stand up to most weather conditions without worry of severe damage. Newer vinyl is even stronger than the older versions and is less likely to crack and become brittle. In addition, vinyl siding can withstand years of sunlight without fading.

Maintenance:

Vinyl siding is easy to maintain. There is no need to ever paint the siding and it never fades from the elements. The only regular maintenance vinyl siding needs is to be spray washed once or twice a year. Vinyl siding has a new look year after year.

Cost Effective:

Siding is much less expensive than repainting and repairing wood on a home. The initial cost of vinyl siding will vary depending on the size of the home and the quality of the siding. Vinyl siding comes in many grains and thickness that will affect the total cost. Vinyl siding can also help reduce energy bills by providing an extra layer of insulation.

Looks:

Vinyl siding comes in many grains and colors to suit most homes. The color is baked through the vinyl instead of applied. This means that the color stays true over a long period of time and will not show scratches or small imperfections.

Remodel Construction offers a wide variety of vinyl siding styles and colors, including horizontal siding, vertical siding, and siding that resembles shingles. Our experts can help you determine the best look and design for your home and budget.

"I've been looking around for top local contractors and I came upon Remodel.com NYC. After speaking to them I picked them for my remodel. I started with just the first floor and then (impressed by their work) I did an extension and fixed the rest of my house... it looks amazing!"

"After Sandy; my home was a wreck...luckily for me I was quickly rescued by Tri-State constructions team. They came to clean-up, redesign and rebuild my new amazing home and I can't thank you guys enough!"

My wife and I used Rem0del.com for our small bathroom and kitchen renovations. We had an excellent experience. Both rooms turned out better than we imagined. Th Rem0del team worked quickly and efficiently, working around our hectic lives, and still leaving us with a livable situation while under construction. The kitchen was especially well done. They incorporated our ideas as well as bringing the designers own expertise to bear. Renovating a one bedroom apartment in Manhattan can be a huge challenge, but the rem0del team were true professionals and a master of their craft.
